What is a right-of-way?

The town owns and maintains the road that passes in front of your property. The road is a right-of-way which exists in one of two forms.

The first is a presumptive right-of-way. Many old deeds on older roads describe property as being to the center of the road. In such cases, the town is given a right-of-way that gives rights to the town to maintain a road, what lies beside the road, and gives the public the use of the road. These rights-of-way are usually two rods (33 feet) wide, however, it should not be assumed as always being the case!

Many old deeds are quite ambiguous in their descriptions (“north-westerly to an oak tree” and “to the centerline of Old Milford Rd”). The oak tree might be long gone, and the centerline of the road might have moved to one side or another from its original positions due to construction, widening, or straightening of the road over the years. Thus, the right-of-way on these roads is generally taken to be from the center of the present road, or between two stone walls if they exist.

On newer roads and properties, especially on roads in a subdivision, the property owner’s deed only goes to the edge of the right-of-way, and the land for the right-of-way is deeded to the town. Thus, the town not only owns the road, but the land on which it’s built. These deeded rights-of-way vary from 33 to 50 feet and sometimes wider.

What is the point of all of this? Road construction and maintenance is not only limited to the paved or travelled surface. The work done to keep water off of, out of, and away from the roadway is done alongside the roadway within the overall right-of-way and any applicable easements (that’s a discussion for a future episode!). This work is vital to the structure of the roadway. It is important that residents keep personal property and plants out of this right-of-way so these systems can work properly and maintenance work can be done as effectively and efficiently as possible for the improvement and protection of your road systems. Should you ever want to know where this line exists and can’t find it, please reach out to the public works department as we would be happy to assist!

Not sure where your right-of-way line lands on your property?

Economic Revitalization Zone Tax Credits FAQs

Brookline has Economic Revitalization Zones to help to stimulate economic redevelopment, expand the commercial and industrial base, create new jobs, reduce sprawl and increase tax revenues by encouraging economic revitalization. This can be a tool to help businesses expand and support some of the risk.

How do I qualify for a tax credit?

Create one or more new full time incremental job(s) and have capital investment in your business during a calendar year. The capital investment is also referred to as a project and every project is unique. Typical projects or capital investment consist of new construction, renovation, expansion or new equipment.

If you have any questions on whether something is considered capital investment you can check with your accountant or call the tax incentive program manager listed below.

- The calendar year eligible will always be the most recent January-December time period. For example, if you are submitting in February 2023, all submitted materials should be for calendar year 2022.

What if my project happened over more than one year?

You could be eligible to apply for a credit more than one year. You need capital investment and new incremental jobs in any calendar year to qualify. Look to see if the project will allow you to align any new hired employees to match up with the capital investment in each year the project took place.

When must I submit my application?

All submissions must be postmarked on or before February 10 each year, with no exceptions. There are no retroactive credits for prior years.

What do I need to provide?

A completed application. You can find it here: www.nheconomy.com—Look under MOVE.

Section A: business information including the business EIN # and brief description of project.

Invoices are required as verification of the project. A spreadsheet or documents summarizing total costs to correspond with project invoices is recommended. Remember eligible invoices are only those dated within the calendar year being considered. Prior year invoices will not be eligible. The only exception is equipment that must be ordered in advance and not placed in service until it will be delivered within the eligible calendar year. Verification must be provided.

Section B: New full time job creation. These are annualized wages. Even if you hire employees in December, please calculate and submit what the employee wages would be for a full year.

Section C: Initial and sign.
